Research Interests

“Currently I am involved in preparing a paper on visualizing death as transgression of the body-politic of Indian Republic. This is a variation in theme of the same topic I studied for my Ph.D. But, in many ways it improves on the former. First, it tries to complete a good portion of the field work that went undone earlier. It seeks to widen the ethnographic canvas by bringing in details of a string of such events that were connected in one way or other to the event discussed in thesis. This involves another round of field work on the ethno-historic turmoil following the Communist rebellion from 1948-52 in India. One good example is the Hajong rebellion in the present Bangladesh. Extensive field work is proposed to find out more about this.”
